Ignorance may be bliss, but a lack of knowledge as to the proper uses of PEARLINE is a marked exception to the rule.

Because its use means the modern way to wash clothes and clean house; it lightens labor; it saves time; it does away with the rubbing, and thus saves the worst of the wear on clothes or paint; it produces unequalled results, and withal is perfectly harmless.

There are two ways to prove this—best way, try it; other way, ask some friend who uses it. You'll be surprised to learn how many do. Sold Everywhere.

Straightening Bow Legs. TWO REMARKABLE OPERATIONS AT THE NEW YORK HOSPITAL.

Prof. William T. Bull, adjunct professor of surgery in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, held the regular clinic in the amphitheatre of the New York Hospital Saturday afternoon. He was assisted by Dr. Ernest H. Lines, the new chief of the surgical staff of the hospital. The professor operated upon two cases of bow colored boy about six years of age.

"Cases of this kind," said the professor,
"are caused by rickets. This malady springs from bad air and want of proper and sufficient food. The formation of the bones has been delayed, the lime saits necessary for their proper growth not having been supplied. The positions in which the child lay then caused the unnatural curves; later the bones become abnormally hard, and the joints become enlarged. Before the bones harden the material curves; later the bones become abnormally hard, and the joints become enlarged. Before the bones harden the curves may be straightened with proper apparatus."

Taking a sosipel, the professor made an incision down the front of the leg, over the curved bone below the knee. With a chisel and mallet he cut out a wedge-shaped piece of bone. He cut nearly through the bone. Turoing the child's leg over, he cut down to the small bone, and making a small out in it, broke it with a quick wrench. He repeated the operation on the other leg. After the wounds were dressed, the child's legs were set in plaster of paris.

We, the undersigned, Presidents of our respective clubs by virtue of the authority vested in us by vote of anid clubs, do here by issue this official call for a convention of Republican clubs in the United States to assemble at Chickering Hall, corner of Eighteenth street and Fifth avenue, in New York city, New York, at 11 o'clock in the formeon of Thursday, December 15, 1887, and to continue in session during Friday, December 15, and Saturday, December 17 at such hours as shall be determined upon by eaid convention. We request each of the permanently or ganized Republican ciubs throughout the country to select five delegates to represent the club in this convention. In a president of each club is by virtue of his office entitled to a sent as a delegate in anid convention, in addition to the five delegates above provided for the delegation from a club to cast but one vote. For the benefit of those who have not seen the previous circulars issued by the "Committee" on Associate Organizations" of the Republican Club of New York, a few words are quoted from the last circular sent ent in regard to the objects of this convention.

The primary object of holding this convontion is to consider the propriety of organizing in the various States of the Union a large number of Republican clubs and to determine the best manner of conducting the work, also to devise some system that will conduce to the efficient co-operation of these clubs in State and National politics, and the formation of a National league

The primary object of holding this accounts for the property of the primary of the property of the primary National league

MOST, THE ANARCHIST. Evidence for the Defence Begun

NEW YORK, Nov. 25. Lawyer Howe opened the defence for the Anarchist Most this morning. He said he would prove that policeman Sachs, who testified that Most used the incendiary language charged against him, was not present at the meeting at which Most is alleged to have spoken. Mr. Howe said he believed Most to be a fanatic and a fool on some sub-jects, but that was no cause for conviction. He could not think that it was morally right to convict a man because there has ded to remain on the books a statute such as made a man like Anthony Com stock the censor of works of art and allowed him to characterize the magic work of the brush which the finest minds admired, as lewd and obsene. He claimed est convictions when he spoke in Kramer's

A Cantain and Sailor Lashed in the Rigging LEAMINGTON, Ont., Nov. 25. Schooner hite Star went ashore at Point Pelee, Lake Erle, yesterday morning, in a heavy gale and dense fog. There were seven men aboard and the schooner's yawl boat would hold but five. Capt. Murphy chose to stay on board, and with him stayed one of the sailors. Late last night the Captain and sailor were in the rigging and it was thought they would be frozen to death before morning.

The Captain and a Sailor named Hunter, remained nineteen hours on the wreck. When they were reacued Hunter was badly frozen and will probab-ly die. The vessel is a total loss.

arceronon went the harvard-late football game began, and the number had swelled to 25,000 by the time the intermission was reached. The grand stand, bleach boards and toboggan slide were covered, many students occupied tally-ho coaches, carry-alls and vehicles of various descriptions, and thousands stood eight and ten deep around the ropes on the north and west sides of the grounds. Both teams were the best that their supporters could put forward, and the struggle was fierce from beginning to close. Yale winning by the more concerted action of her players at oritical points. The game began promptly at two octock, and the scene throughout was stirring. As the contest progressed elergymen and college professors forgot their dignity, and joined the crowd in cheering, their favorities, while the many ladder procent waved their colors and found many ways of expressing their entimessor.

Notice of Assignee of His Appointment

BY WILKIE COLLINS

COUNTESS NARONA.

Francis recognized at a glance the woman of all others whom he most cordially disliked, the widow of his dead brother, the first Lord Montbarry. He frowned as he looked at her His experience on the stage gathered at in numerable rehearsals with actresses who had sorely tried his temper, had accustomed him to speak roughly to women who were distractful to him. "I remember vou," he said. "I thought you were in America." She took no notice of his ungracious tome and manner she simply stopped him when he lifted his hat and turned to leave her "Let me walk with you a few minutes," she quietly replied. "I have something to say to you.

ou

He showed her his cigar "I am smoking,"

He showed her his cigar "I am smoking," he said

'I don't mind smoking "
After that there was nothing to be done (short of downight brutailty) but to yield. He did it with the worst possible grace, well, he resumed "What do you want of me?

You shall bear directly Mr Westwick. Let ma first tell you what my position is. I am alone in the world To the loss of my husband has now been added another becausement—the loss of my companion in America, my brother Baron Rivai."

The reputation of the baron and the doubt which sendal had thrown on his assumed relationship to the countess were well known to Francia. Shot in a gambling saloon?" he asked brutally

'The question is a perfectly natural one on your part; sho said, with the impendiably ironical manning which she could assume on certain occasions. "As a native of horseraning England, you belong to a nation of gamblers. My brother deed no extraordinary death, Mi Westwick He said, with many other unfortunate people unden a fever prevalent in a western city which we happened to visit. The calamity of his loss made the United States unendurable for me I left by the first steamer that saited from New York—a French vessel, which brought me to Harve I continued my lonely journey to the south of France. And then I wend on it Yomee.

What does all this matter to me? Frances thought to limited! She paused evidently expecting him to say something. So you have come to Venuce! he sail cancelessiy.

What all the sail the paused citiest.

Why?

Because I couldn't help it she answered.

that spun is odd to remarked. Why couldn't you help it?

Women are accustomed to act on impulse, sho explained. Suppose we say that an impulse has directed my joines? And yet, this is the last place in the world that I wish to find myself in Associations that I detect are connected with it in 12 mind. If I had a will of my own I would rever see it 'gain. I hate Vinice As you see however, I am here When did you meet with such an unreason inhe woman before? Never, I am stue? She stopped, eyed him for a moment, and suidenly altered her tone. When is Miss Agnis Lockwood expected to be in Venice!

It was not easy to throw Frances off his balance but that extraordinary question did it. 'How the devil did you know that Miss Lockwood was connig to Venice?' he exclaime!

She laughe!—a hitter, moclane, leach

She laughel—a hitter, morting laugh She laughel—a hitter, morting laugh Say I guessed it Something in the audicious defiance of her cyes as they rested or it in roused the quick temper that was in Francis Westwick Leviy Montherry—he began the proposed from brother Stephens wife calls herself Lady Montharry now I share my talle with no woman Call me by my name before I con mitted the fatal instake of marrying your brother Address me if you please as Countess Yarona.

Countess Nationa, Francis resumed if your of ject in claiming my acquirintance is to mystify me you have come to the wrong man Speak plainly or permit me to wish you good exeming. If your object is to lesp Miss Lock woods arrival: 11 Venice a specific she potential

If your object is to I sap Miss Lockwood's arrival; it Venice a secret, she retorted 'speak plaint's Mr. Westwel on your iside and say so.

Her i stention was evidently to cutato him, and she succeeded. Nonsense, he broke out petuliantly 'My brother straveling arrangements are secrets to nobody. He brings Mr. & Lock wood here with Lady Montharry and the hikien. As you seem so well in formed, perhaps you how why she is coming to Vanice.

The counters had suddenly become grave and the ightful. She made no 10ply. The two strate, by associated companions having ranked on a twicing the counter of the grand of the show the architecture of the grand cathedral in its won leful vinety lof detail. From the pigeons of 5t Mark throw to shike in durk, closely packed rows, roosting in the archivasy of the grand cathedral in the ways of the grand cathedral in the ways of the grand cathedral in the hospital which is the old church lool so beauthful by moonlight! the counters said, quietly Speaking not to France doors.

Goodly, At. Mark s by moonlight?

Francis listening to be with wondering lool s

No, 'sho rest used, placulty picking up the lost thread of the conversation, 'I don't know why Miss Lockwood is coming here. I only know that we are to meet in Venece.

By previous appointment?

"By destiny' she answered, with her head on her breast and her opes on the ground francis burst out laughing. 'Or, it you like to letter' she instantly resumed 'by what fools call chance."

Francis answered easily out of the depths of his stiong common sense. Chance seems to be taking a queer way of bringing the meeting about 'he said. "We have all ar langed to meet at the Falace hotel. How is at that your name is not on the Visitor's List?
Destiny ought to have brought you to the Palace hotel too.'

She abruptly palled down her veil. 'Destury may do that yet! she said. 'The Paldec hotel?' she repeated spenking once more to bersel! 'The old hell transformed into the new jurgatory. The place itself! She peused and laid her hand on her companion's arm

'Perhaps Miss Lockwood is not going there with the rest of your? she burst out with sud den eagerness. "Are you positively sure she will be at the botel?"

"Gostuely! Haven't I told you that Miss Lockwood travels with Lord and Lady Montburry? And don't you know that she is a member of the family? You will have to more, countess to our kotel."

She was perfectly impenetrable to the ban tering tone in which he spoke. 'Yes,' she said, family, 'I shall have to move to your hotel.' Her hand was still on his arm, he could feel her shreering from head to foot while she spoke Hearthy as he disliked and distrusted her, the common instanct of hi manity obliged him to ake if she feet cold
"Yes,' she said, "cold and fairt."

"Cold and fairt, countess, on such a night as ting?"

gave her own orders to the water, without troubling him to speak for her.

"Maraschine, And a pot of tea."

The waiter stared; Fruncis stared. The tea was a novelty fin connection with maraschino) to both of them Careless whether she surprised them or not, she instructed the waiter, when her instructions had been complied with, to pour a large wineplassful of the liquor into a famble and fill if up from the teaper. If can't do it for myself," she remarked, "my hand trembles so." She drank the strangs mixture cegarly, hot as it was. "Maraschino punch—will you taste some of it?" she said. 'I inherit the discovery of this drink. When your English queen, Caroline, was on the continent my mother was attached to her court. That much injured royal per son invented in her happier bours maraschino punch. Fondly attached to her gracious mis tress, my mother shared her fastes. And I, in my turn, learned from my mother. Now, Mr. Westwick, suppose I tell you what my business is. You are manager of a theatre Do you want a new play—provided it's a good one,"

'And you pay, if it's a good one,"

'And you pay, if it's a good one,"

'I navise a play will you read it,"
If I write a play will you read it,"
If I write a play will you read it,"
Fruncis lessitated

"What has put writing a play into your feed," he asked.

"Mero accident, she answered. "I had one occasion to tell my late brother of a visit I pad to Miss Lockwood when I was list in England. He took no interest in what happened at the interview, but someting struck him in my way of relating it. He said 'You describe what passed between you and the lady with the point and contrast of good stage dalogue. You have the dra matic instance—try if you can write a play you might make money! That put it anto my head.'

These last words seemed to startle Francis.

Surely, you don't want money!' he ex Surely, you don't want money!' he exclaimed
'I always want money My tastes are expensive. I have nothing but my poor little four hundred a year—and the wrock that is left of the other money. About £200 in circular notes no more.

Francis hew that she was 1 eferring to the £10 000 paid by the insurance offices.

"All those thomanids gone already?" he exclaimed. She blew a puff of air over her fingers.

"Gone hi e that!" she answered, coolly. Baron Rivar!'
She looked at him with a flash of anger in her hard black eyes.

She looked at him with a flash of anger in her hard black eyes.

Wy affect are my own secret Mr Westwick. I have made you a proposal—and you have not answered me yet. Don't say no, without thinking first Remember what a life mine has been. I have seen more of the world than most prople, playwrights in cluded. I have had strange adventures a lave observed I have embeded Are there no materials bero in my head for writing a play—if the opportunity is granted to ma? She wated a moment and suddenly repeated her strange question about Agnes. (When is Mass Lockwood expected to be in Venico?)

What has that to do with you ney play countess?)
